conventional backlight source is generally designed to illuminate a flat display screen, such as an LCD panel.
The display screen, such as the LCD panel is made of a number of glass plates each having a thickness that is less than the thickness of glass plates of a television or a computer monitor.
To maintain a required amount of light emitted from the backlight source, a portion of the light emitted from the backlight source may be intercepted by the glass plates of the LCD panel. In view of the foregoing, the industry has attempted to replace the conventional backlight with a backlight source that may be suspended above the
