A new approach to creating a personalized scaffold for the bone-implant interface. This article introduces a new methodology for fabricating the implant-tissue interface, the bone scaffold. The scaffold is tailor-made to the patient's bone quality. For this purpose, first a 3-D bone model is created, using medical imaging data and known bone properties. In a second step, the data of the bone scaffold are extracted and used to create a solid model of the scaffold, the shape of which is suited to the bone model. The parameters and geometry of the scaffold are simulated numerically. In a third step, the same simulated scaffold is constructed with three-dimensional printing technology, and the scaffold is inserted in the bone model. The simulation and experiments validate the methodology. The outcomes of this study can also be used for other applications, such as tissue engineering. It is a place to share how my grandkids have grown, my challenges and blessings, my thoughts on life and faith, and whatever else comes to mind. I'm a wife to a dedicated, hard-working Pastor and the mother of 5 spirited grandchildren. I enjoy painting and scrapbooking and was a Speech-Language Pathologist for over 30 years until a back injury in 2002 halted my work career. I have a side job as a volunteer Domestic Violence advocate, which is a struggle with me because I am aware of so many women in need of help, and I want to do more.
