You're all in your comfy, cozy homes, and none of the live sporting event you had hoped to watch is being televised. Sure, there's ESPN, but you're currently not watching sports. But, you still want to know the scores of the games you've been watching since the season began (if not since the preseason) — and you don't want to have to get on a computer or ask someone in real life what the score is. So, for an entire week, you'll have some access to the live scores of the games you have been watching on TV — no matter where you live. Hopefully, this will help you out. During the first week of the season, we've already seen the Cubs, Giants, Dodgers and the Yankees all knock out their first home wins of the season. So, if you haven't been watching the baseball games in real life this week, and have been streaming, here are the final live baseball scores you need to know. As always, if you need more information, just head back to NY, L.A. or San Francisco and get some live score updates. Or, you can wait and look them up at the official MLB live score page, here.
