Main menu Post navigation Habits of Highly Effective People Highly effective people are usually the most "personal" of people. They are productive because they are in charge of their own selves. It's all personal because they are the expert on their own most important asset - their mind and how to make it work. The description of highly effective people above does not mean that they are perfect people. It means that they have mastered their own mind. They know how to achieve their goals and are confident in what they are doing. Most of us need to work a bit on this. What habits make highly effective people? 1. They take responsibility for their own mistakes. They don't blame others. They are proactive. They solve their own problems and then get the support and assistance they need to complete their jobs. 2. They always have a plan. They always follow a plan for their lives. They are disciplined because they are always following a set of rules and habits to help them stay on track. 3. They are responsible for their own emotions. They are responsible for their emotional well-being. They have healthy ways to deal with fear and anger. 4. They seek to understand. They are curious to understand other points of view. They have to knowledge of what is going on around them. They build their reputation by being able to make good decisions and deal with problems well. 5. They don't act out of desperation. They understand that great things can be achieved when they are optimistic about the future. They look for the best possible outcome for them and those they are working with. 6. They look for the best solution to every problem. If they get hit with a bad idea they work hard to think better options. 7. They are generous and quick to share their knowledge. They know that it is a team game and they give something back to help others.
