Hereditary hypercholesterolaemia (FH) is a common autosomal dominant disorder with reduced low-density lipoprotein (LDL) receptor activity. FH is characterised by elevated serum LDL cholesterol, xanthomas and premature atherosclerotic cardiovascular disease. The majority of known FH cases are due to mutations in the low-density lipoprotein receptor (LDLR) gene. We are reporting a family with heterozygous missense mutation in exon 14 of the LDLR gene. This is a novel mutation with a G-->C transition at cDNA position 436 (G436C) resulting in substitution of Pro with Arg at amino acid position 146 (P146R). We also described the effect of the mutation on the receptor activity and LDL uptake in a reporter cell line.Q: How can I access elements of an array in C#? I got some sort of list which contains objects, which just have a name, and I want to print them out in the console. But now I don't know how. List list = new List(); I tried this to loop it: foreach (var item in list) { Console.WriteLine(item.entity); } but this doesn't work. If I just write Console.WriteLine(list[1].entity); it works. How can I write it in a for loop without declaring the list in advance? A: The problem is that you are trying to use the entity member on a List. Think of it like this, what member do you expect to have? You've got a List so it is expecting you to have a collection of entityObject objects in it. The solution is to write your foreach loop so that you can access the member on each item in the list foreach (var item in list) { Console.WriteLine(item.entity);
